VT RIBERA DEL GALLEGO - CINCO VILLAS

EVOHÉ Viñas Viejas TEMPRANILLO - 90 Points

I like wines from the less known and hidden areas. In Spain we can assume that not everything good is labeled with DO. We are talking about a wine from the VT Ribera del Gallego, a Tempranillo that differentiates from the more "Atlantic" DO's Ribera del Duero and Rioja Alta. This Aragonese counterpart has in common the minerality of the old vines but with an earthy touch and greater aridity of the area without over maturation. By color it could be confused or identified with Grenacha due to the joined complexity shown in pallet.

Well, all this is found in this Old Vine EVOHÉ Tempranillo (2010). A wine that could only be conceived by a few enthusiasts with certain intellectual charge and clear view for the biodiversity: Ricardo Mosteo, Henrik Heikel and Alfonso Mort. Following in the footsteps of the master who conceived the idea, Joan Mila, who passed away two years ago. This project initially began with the Grenacha, this time applied to the Tempranillo, a challenge when this early maturing varietal is grown in a hostile scenario with high daytime temperatures in an area as the Ribera del Gallego. A territory that rises between Huesca and Zaragoza.

A nice lively burgundy red color, very tasty, fresh fruit that contrasts with the high alcohol content that's barely perceived.

Excellent value. Rated: 90 Points, 9/2012
